Scott,

Attached are the spreadsheets of tweets and direct messages as exported from Axiom.

Given your request for expedited processing, I don't want to hold up this delivery, but I want to note that I noticed some discrepancies in the timestamps of some tweets as reported by Axiom while checking over the results. If the timestamps of certain tweets are important, I would recommend referring back to the original text files from Twitter. I can walk you through that process if necessary.

Also, this does not contain group direct messages. Will continue working on that.

Are you available for a call at 10 tomorrow?

Here are the direct message files from the Twitter returns. I'd recommend asking ITM to install Notepad++ on your computer. It's better for viewing and searching these files than Notepad.

Hi Scott. I think it would be better if we talked Monday. Nothing new to report yet and I'm out of the office today.

Hey Scott,

The returns have been processed but they require some manual work in order for us to match up the communication with the media files inside of the return. Unfortunately, the tool we have does not do that. This is going to take us some time. Joe Varani, cc'd, is my team lead and he will be assisting while I am out on leave.

Thanks,

Crystal
